NEWS FROM THE PRESIDENT

THOSE WE WILL MISS

 IONA E. FOX ***

The temperatures in Michigan this past week certainly feel like summer, so now is the time to make summer plans. Include making time to attend the Annual Meeting in Empire on July 30, 1994.

In other Society News, I researched the Memorandum of Agreement and it appears it will take some time before the Agreement will be reached with the SOUTH MANITOU MEMORIAL SOCIETY and SLEEPING BEAR DUNES NATIONAL LAKESHORE.

I do have an update on the grave site fences. I had an opportunity on June 1, to see an old section of fence while visiting Sleeping Bear Dunes National Lakeshore. I believe this can be replicated for some of the outlying grave sites. If you think you can help with this project, please contact me at:

P.O. Box 177, Empire, MI 49630.

Thank you.

Paul Rocheleau
 President

Iona was born Sept. 4, 1911, in Lima, Ohio, to Samuel W. and Mary C. (Beck) Morris. Her mother Mary was the first child born to August and Elizabeth Beck, of South Manitou Island.

Although Iona did not live year-round on the island, she enjoyed many visits while her family lived there. She wrote her memories of a "fearful Christmas crossing" to the Island in an earlier Memorial Society newsletter. She never missed a South Manitou Reunion Picnic!!

Iona graduated from the Munson Hospital School of Nursing where she was employed for 15 years.

Iona passed away at 82 years young on Feb. 20, 1994. She is buried in Champion Hill Cemetery.

We offer our belated sympathies to her family and friends. We will miss her.

BETTY KRAMER COLLECTION: UPDATE

The Betty Kramer collection will be given to the Leelanau County Historical Museum. This decision was reached after several potential sites had been visited, investigated, and discussed among several members of the South Manitou Memorial Society and its ad hoc Library Committee. The criteria used to reach this decision were:

1. The interest expressed for the Island and its history.
2. The capability and the capacity of the physical structures.
3. The expansion plans.
4. The expertise of the staff.
5. The existence of formal policies of donations, collections, and loans.
6. The financial picture.

The Museum has formal policies in place which have been tested and refined with time. It has realistic plans for growth. It has a governing body so as the staff changes the integrity and continuity of the institution will continue. And the ties that are shared by Betty, South Manitou Island, and Leland are strong indeed.

With the permission of Laura Quackenbush, Curator of the Museum, the collection will be presented to her at the annual picnic on July 30 in Empire. Many thanks to Sylvia Krueger who has researched Betty's collection of Island memorabilia and discovered rare jewels among the treasure, and to Glenn Furst who initiated the process.

NEWS FROM SLEEPING BEAR DUNES NATIONAL LAKESHORE

FRIENDS GROUP ORGANIZED

The new coordinator between the park and the Memorial Society is Historic Architect Kimberly Mann. Ray Kimpel retired on April 30th, after more than thirty years with the National Park Service. Kim will be present at the July 30th meeting and picnic to meet with members and discuss projects currently being worked on in the Park.

The time has come for the formation of a community based support group for the Sleeping Bear Dunes National Lakeshore. As Federal fiscal priorities are being restructured, many Congressionally mandated tasks in park conservation, preservation, education and interpretation will be either postponed or cancelled outright unless community based volunteerism fills the void.

The Regional Office has funded a study of the Agriculture History of South Manitou Island, and has again brought in Professors Arnold Alanan and William Tischler from the University of Wisconsin to evaluate the farmstead and farming patterns associated with South Manitou Island. Graduate student Brenda Williams, working with Professors Tischler and Alanan, will also be present at the July 30th meeting and picnic to meet with members and accompany the group to South Manitou to view the agricultural sites with the families present.

Friends of the Sleeping Bear Dunes, is dedicated to supporting the National Lakeshore in fulfilling its responsibilities, albeit in no way endeavoring to either set nor influence Lakeshore policies or related legislative bills.

Professors Tischler and Alanan have been working on agriculture-related projects for the park over the last two years. They have completed an agricultural history of Leelanau and Benzie Counties and are completing the agricultural history of the Port Oneida area.

The group has already elected a Board of Directors and is diligently bringing into being the Constitution, By-Laws and the Memorandum of Understanding with the National Lakeshore. They are now in the "planning" stages.

"I REMEMBER WHEN ..."

MASS BURIAL ON SOUTH MANITOU

From the time I was a small boy I've heard rumors of a mass burial located along the timberline of South Manitou Island bay. "About half way down from the Life Boat Station to the Old Dock" they would say. This story was told many times by the following people: my Grandpa and Grandma Furst, August Beck, William Haas, Henry Haas, Conrad Hutzler and Benth Johnson. Benth Johnson was a sailor all his life until he settled on South Manitou. He raised a family there on a farm and supplemented his living by fishing the waters of Lake Michigan. He said this story was common knowledge to the sailors of the Great Lakes. When these people were questioned as to the exact spot where the grave was located no one seemed to know.

The number of people buried was always consistent and no one could tell you that seventeen (17) people were buried in that one grave, but no each could point out the grave site. The cause of death was always the same cholera, an acute infectious, bacterial disease of the stomach and intestines. Never did I ever have anyone tell me they had witnesses this burial, nor did I ever hear anyone name a person who was present when this burial was made. Did this event take place in the early days of the Manitou Island history? Was the ship a sailing vessel? Were the people passengers or crew members? If they were crew members, were there enough people left to sail the vessel? What was their destination?

My step-father, Ernest Hutzler, on several occasions when we were hunting rabbits along the edge of the woods in the bay area, would say "Glenn, we must be close to the place where that mass grave is." How did he know? I'll never know as he never told me that his father or grandfather ever pointed it out to him.

In the 1970's, when I was locating the grave sites in the farm lands, I drove to Northport, Michigan, on a couple occasions to ask Erwin Beck the specific areas of some of the graves. On one trip I asked him if he knew anything about a mass burial on the island. He told me that he didn't know of anyplace on the island, but he had heard about a ship that sank near the mouth of the bay during a storm that had about fifteen Indians in the hold. They never got out. These Indian men were going up to the Upper Peninsula to work in logging camps. After some debate, it was decided to leave their bodies where they were in the hold of that ship. This is an intriguing story and opens the mind to an alternative answer to the question of "was there ever a mass burial on the island?"

During the 1970's after the evening meal I would take my probing rod and test various areas for a grave site along the edge of the woods in the bay area. This was a half-hearted attempt on my part and I'm sure that, if I had located a place that had all the characteristics of a mass grave, I would have, if I had located it. I would not have had any interest in digging for bones.

One can let their imagination run wild on this story and ask themselves dozens of questions.

Lou Raynor, a man who built a cottage down in the bay area during the 1960's, stated that he had observed an elderly man, and Indian, carefully looking over the area just north of his cottage. Lou became curious and asked this person what he was looking for and the following is what he was told. The man said that many years earlier he came here on a ship that had many sick people on board with a disease called cholera and several of them died. He said they buried them there along the timberline. His memory of where he thought the grave site was, was limited to a small area, and it was here that I did most of my probing with an iron rod.

The time period this Indian man indicated when the bodies were buried there, would have been during the period when the people named earlier in this story were living on the island. Why didn't any of them know where this grave was located? Was it because cholera was such an infectious disease that no one wanted to even come close enough to observe the burial? Why didn't someone mark this site? Wouldn't a burial of this type have to be recorded somewhere?

I am sure the story of a mass burial will always be a part of the South Manitou Island history. I do not believe this grave site will ever be found, and I do not believe it will ever be confirmed, or proven untrue.

This story has been told to me by so many of my elders, people I loved and trusted, I believe it is true.
